

סוכות Sukkot

On the first day you shall take the fruit of hadar trees, branches of palm trees, boughs of leafy trees, and willows of the brook, and you shall rejoice before the Lord your God seven days.

Leviticus 23:40

Year after year, we hold the Four Species in our hands. They are fragrant and familiar and remind us of the agricultural roots of the festival of Sukkot. A midrash in Vayikra Rabbah (30:12) seeks to unearth deeper meaning by pairing each of the Four Species with a part of our bodies. As we reflect on the midrash and shake the Four Species in service to God, we are reminded of the importance of using our bodies in service to humankind.

The hadas, a bough from a myrtle tree, represents the human eye. As we wave it in front of us, let us break down the barriers we have erected so that we may truly begin to see and recognize the suffering of others.

The aravah, a leafy branch from a willow tree, represents the human mouth. As we wave it at our sides, let us locate our voices loud and strong so that we may speak out on behalf of those who are muted.

The lulav, a frond from a date palm, represents the human spine. As we wave it high, let us begin to recover our strength and resilience so that we may join with those who have been rendered powerless.

The etrog, a fruit from the citron tree, represents the human heart. As we wave it low, let us reach into the wellspring of our compassion so that we may open our hearts to all the inhabitants of our world.

As we join the Four Species together in our hands, let us unite as a community and use our collective vision, voice, power and compassion to confront injustice. For more information about American Jewish World Service, please visit our website at www.ajws.org or call 800.889.7146.

American Jewish World Service (AJWS) is an international development organization motivated by Judaism's imperative to pursue justice. AJWS is dedicated to alleviating poverty, hunger and disease among the people of the developing world regardless of race, religion or nationality. Through grants to grassroots organizations, volunteer service, advocacy and education, AJWS fosters civil society, sustainable development and human rights for all people, while promoting the values and responsibilities of global citizenship within the Jewish community.